OUR FILE HPSCI
RECPT # _____

As promised, we informally bounced this idea off our Committee staffs yesterday. HPSCI staff commented that we ought to consider very carefully the wisdom of publishing a chronology at this point, since new facts are continuing to come to light daily (e.g., yesterday's revelation that there is a signed 6 January Finding in existence). The point is that we may find ourselves in the awkward position of having to issue additional notices to our people retracting or supplementing what they previously have been told.

I think that there is merit to what HPSCI says. Accordingly, if the consensus is that we have to put out something in the next few days, I would suggest a more generally worded statement along the lines of the attached. The notice would basically end by telling our people that "we'll keep you posted on further developments."
